Reflecting on 2020

As we look back to the close of 2020, REAP can report the following top 20 accomplishments even amidst one of the most challenging years of our time:

1. In the midst of a raging pandemic, REAP’s staff stayed healthy, and we adapted to working remotely.
2. We refined our mission statement, which now greets all visitors to our website landing page: “Advancing diversity, equity and inclusion in the commercial real estate industry.” REAP staff also executed a total site redesign to deliver a high impact impression of the Project REAP mission.
3. Thanks to Bisnow.com, REAP became a member of the SelectLeaders real estate job posting network—alongside other CRE organizations such as BOMA, NAREIT and PREA. While we did see some REAP alums negatively impacted by a contracting COVID economy, we also saw REAP alumni hired in real estate positions at Marcus & Millichap, NYC’s Housing Development Corp., ICSC and even a startup manufacturer of electric vehicles, Lucid Motors. We also circulated several job opportunities to the REAP alumni network.
4. We recruited a new senior leadership representative of the Urban Land Institute to join our board of directors.
In partnership with ULI, we launched our first ever virtual academy with a combined enrollment of over 180 fellows—including participants domiciled in India and Japan.

We began 2020 by launching academies in NYC and Chicago, only to suspend them because of the pandemic, then later to complete them by folding them into the autumn virtual academy.

Notwithstanding the pandemic’s stresses on the general CRE market, we attracted new sponsors in new sectors of the industry, including healthcare and institutional real estate investment management.

We published a Call to Action highlighting steps the CRE industry can take to advance diversity & inclusion.

As a result of that Call to Action—as well as the racial justice aftermath of the George Floyd execution—we increased our visibility in the CRE media.

Several of REAP’s most seasoned and accomplished alumni were invited to attend the prestigious Product Council meetings hosted by ULI during its virtual Fall Conference.

A monthly Industry Bulletin was launched as a new publication to regularly communicate with our industry sponsors and supporters.

In the aftermath of the untimely death of our board of directors’ colleague, we established the Eric Yarbro Scholarship Fund to honor his memory. That fund was started with seminal support from Colliers International, the Real Estate Board of New York, and REAP founder Mike Bush.

We also partnered to launch a new initiative, Open Access. That program will be providing internships in community development finance sponsored by major firms active in the New Markets Tax Credit industry and alternative finance.

We hosted our first webinar on the growing life sciences sector, an informative session delivered by JLL’s national practice leader for the life sciences sector, Travis McCready.

We also conducted a webinar on the healthcare real estate industry, another sector with heightened prominence as a result of the pandemic.

We conducted a board assessment to examine our strengths and weaknesses in board governance.

We held a virtual board retreat to review that board assessment and strengthen the cohesiveness our board.

As a further step towards better governance, we revised our corporate by-laws and engaged a board governance consultant to assist us in that endeavor.

We conducted an alumni fundraising campaign, #22for2020, that significantly increased the volume of alumni donations over the previous year.

What’s next on the horizon for REAP?

1. We will continue to develop alternative programming options such as our virtual academy.
2. We are planning REAP’s eventual expansion into new markets.
3. We will elevate alumni engagement through programming and networking.
4. We are developing ways to expedite and improve the connections between talented professionals and sponsors.
5. We will forge more partnerships with organizations, companies and educational institutions that support us.

We welcome all to be a part of the mission and, once more, thank you warmly for your support.

THANKS TO ALL ALUMNI & SUPPORTER DONORS

2020 was a pivotal year in many ways. The year also marked 22 years of Project REAP serving to advance diversity in the commercial real estate industry. The #22for2020 REAP fundraising campaign saw alumni and supporters contributing $22, $220, $2,200 — or any amount in between — based on what REAP has meant to them during its 22 years of existence. We raised nearly $12,000.00 for the year! We would like to recognize and sincerely thank all our donors, with Special Thanks to Buwa Binatie - Binatie Family Foundation, Angele Robinson-Gaylord, Alexandrea McKinnon, and KBC Advisors for their contributions $500 and well above.

REAP fondly remembers Eric S. Yarbro, a member of the REAP Board of Directors, a pillar in the commercial real estate community, and a tireless champion of diversity in the CRE industry. More importantly, to those lucky to have known him — a father, family member, friend, colleague, mentor.

We will miss and remember him always.

In his honor, REAP has established the Eric Yarbro Memorial Scholarship Fund, with generous seed contributions on behalf of Eric's colleagues at Colliers International and the Real Estate Board of New York, REAP founder Mike Bush, Philip S. Hart (REAP Board of Directors), and the Adolph & Ruth Schnurmacher Foundation. For anyone wishing to contribute, please email info@projectreap.org.

Read our initial memorial here >>

"...for dozens of professionals of color in the CRE industry, he will be best remembered as an inspiration, a mentor, a champion, and a friend..."

We will best honor his memory by affirming and advancing his commitment to the economic empowerment and advancement of the under-represented."

In Fall 2020, Urban Land Institute and REAP formed a strategic partnership to create the ULI/REAP Virtual Academy, building on a long-standing relationship between the organizations with a common goal of strengthening the real estate industry. With the current digital transition, REAP had the opportunity to expand our traditional in-person program into an online academy nationwide. The first-ever virtual academy was completed on December 11th. We had over 180 graduates inclusive of the NYC and Chicago academies that were suspended early last year by the pandemic. The latest fellows included participants based in India and Japan. This new virtual platform allows CRE firms the opportunity to pair their corporate brands with ULI, the 45,000-member global network of cross-disciplinary real estate and land use experts. Congrats to the Fall 2020 graduates!

ULI Learning is partnering with REAP again in Spring 2021 to make this online experience possible. For more information about sponsorship opportunities for this and other programs, please contact info@projectreap.org.
